For far too long I have witnessed the political prosecution of Microsoft. Ever since I have been aware of the so called anti-trust suits I have asked myself why would anybody want to prosecute a company just because the man at the top is so much smarter than his peers in other companies. We certainly have more to worry about than poor losers who can't admit anybody else is smarter than they are.

Jealously hurts the corporate big shot as much as the little man who is jealous of his wife for no reason. Let's quit the bickering and let Microsoft go back to doing what they do best - keeping their customers happy.
